I normally focus my picks on furniture for small condos. However, for this article, I have turned my attention towards dining tables appropriate for larger condos. While I typically recommend glass table tops and simple lines for small spaces, with more space comes more options. Larger spaces accommodate larger dining tables constructed from a wider range of materials that complement other furnishings. For example, you can see in these pages how traditional table legs have been substituted with sculptural and/or unusual shaped legs that create movement to what is normally a static piece of furniture. I also recommend to my clients, when possible, that they select a one-piece table top as it avoids breaking up the visual unity of the piece with extension lines. ☺
